

The QUEENSLANDER PICTORIAL.

BRISBANE FROM THE AIR.

The Heart of the City.
See Location.

For full particulars

BRISBANE FROM THE AIR.

For Thral, photo
© copyright.

Looking across Albion and Woolloona to Kedron Park.

A glimpse of Ascot Racecourse and boomers.

THE NEW CITY PLAN

1. The new city plan is a masterpiece of urban planning.
2. From the center of the city, the plan radiates outwards in all directions.
3. The plan is a masterpiece of urban planning.
4. The plan is a masterpiece of urban planning.

Special features of the plan

ARRIVAL AT VANDERBILT, AN HOUR AFTER LEAVING LITTON.
Dr. J. J. Wright, who was a passenger, is seen shaking hands with Dr. Barker, an old friend of the machine.

THE AIRPLANE PREPARED TO LEAVE HARRISON.
Note the position of the supporting arms, which make the pilot's task a difficult one both in taking out and in coming in a flight.

WORK OF THE PEACE DANK AEROMAN AT HARRISON.

Noting the condition of the ground near the plane before it was high enough to start the test, all present a high note with each other that it was particularly marked. The photograph shows the machine after it had been run down.

WAITING AT HARRISON FOR THE PEACE DANK AEROMAN TO ARRIVE.

At the landing ground at Harlan, a high note was made when the plane, which was the first of the series, had been damaged, as the machine had "come to rest" on a rough patch of ground.

DESTROYING SHIPWRECK FROM THE AIR.

The "Glenaladale" photographer, Mr. F. W. Tait, is the first to use a camera with the flash-light apparatus to assist the air camera in taking the aerial photographs of wrecks, which are reproduced on the preceding pages.

THE LATE MR. JOHN COCHRAN, OF GLENALADALE, AND MRS. COCHRAN.

Mr. Cochran died at Glenaladale on September 11 last year, the day after he celebrated his 100th birthday—his "centenary."

THE FATHER OF LAYBURN.

The late Mr. John Layburn, who died last year, was the father of the first of the Layburns who lived at Glenaladale, where they lived for 100 years. In 1811, when he was 100 years old, the famous Layburns were the first to be buried in a day that would give some a shiver, due to the rain.

THE PAIR OF THE AIR—A REMARKABLE PHOTOGRAPH.

The largest photograph of the wreck of the ship, which was made by Mr. F. W. Tait, is the first of the series of the "Glenaladale" photographs, which are reproduced on the preceding pages. The photograph was taken at the Glenaladale (Glenaladale) in 1911, and is a very fine example of a photograph.

THE FINEST VIEW OF THE TRANSMISSION ADJUTANT.

The picture gives a good idea of the "style of room" (Glenaladale) and the "style of room" (Glenaladale).

HOMeward Bound.

J. H. H. photo.

Leaving Liverpool - our first hour.

The transport ship.

Arrival at Canary Islands.

The native, traders, Canary Islands.

Walkway on board.

A pretty home, Murca, S. A.

Adjoining Street Capetown.

Looking to the sea.

View of Cape Point.

At Port Adelaide.

Near Capetown.

A view to the sea.

Wharves of Port Adelaide.

On the Australian soil some more.